WAR SUPPLIES DIFFERENT

WASHINGTON, April 22.-The United States government has had no official information of the sales persistently reported from Europe of American ships to either Russia or Japan. There already has been some speculation in official circles as to whether or not such sales could be permitted, and one thing is quite certain, namely, that no vessel under the American flag could be allowed to pass directly into the possession of the government of either belligerent state. This is said to be true of merchant ships as well as warships, as the former might easily be transformed to cruisers or used as troop transports and the spirit of modern international law is said to be decidedly against the transfer of any floating property to a belligerent which could be used for warlike purposes. There is a line of difference between ships and war supplies. The latter may properly be regarded as merchandise.

But to the official mind there is doubt of the right to prohibit the sale of an American ship of the merchant class to an powers or to the citizen of a third power unless it can be very clearly established that the vessel is not to pass to the possession of one of the beligerent governin the United States which can be sold, all so that the question is reduced to that of merchant vessels and that phase is receivng careful attention The principles laid down by the Geneva
